16-Year Old Breaks World Record in a Porsche.

When I was a 16 years old driver, my greatest achievement was not perspiring through my t-shirt during my driver training assessment. Sixteen-year-old Chloe Chambers, on the other hand, has just eclipsed a world record. Behind the wheel of a stock 2020 Porsche 718 Spyder, Chambers became a Guinness World Record holder for the fastest Slalom, with a time of 47.45 seconds.

"It looks easy, but it's really not - to weave between 50 cones as fast as possible, trying to beat a record time and knowing I couldn't touch a single one for the run to count - I definitely felt the pressure," Chloe said. "Everything came together on my final run; the car worked beautifully, and I found the grip I needed. Thank you to my family and to Porsche for supporting and believing in me."

The record was previously set by a Chevrolet Camaro in 2018 so Chloe knew in order to set a new record, Chloe needed all of her skill and the perfect, precise vehicle. That is why she specifically chose the Spyder. With its mid-mounted engine, carefully tuned suspension, and 4.4 second 0-100 km/h acceleration time, it is perfectly designed to dance through the obstacles.

Chloe has been conquering racetracks in karts for seven years before entering the world of motorsports. On top of this milestone achievement and budding racing career, Chloe is also an honour student and a black belt in Taekwondo.

"We couldn't be more proud that Chloe set the record," said Klaus Zellmer, President and CEO of Porsche Cars North America. "From the whole Porsche family we send our heartfelt congratulations – we're pleased to have been able to support Chloe with her ambitious record attempt and share her relief that it was successful."

When her father let her know she had officially achieved the winning record, Chloe exclaimed, "Oh thank goodness!" and jumped out of the car for a hug. "It was a great learning experience for me," she grinned afterwards. "I'm super happy with everyone's effort and help in achieving our goal. It was a fun week, required a lot of focus and patience, and I'm grateful for the amazing opportunity."

Porsche has always been committed to making cars move, but with a driver like Chloe we're able to make them dance - on a world record-breaking scale. Want to see what you can do behind the wheel of a Spyder? Contact us today at Porsche Centre Kelowna.

Porsche Introduces a Unique, Plant-Based Body Kit.

Porsche can now unequivocally say their prototyped 718 Cayman GT4 with a farm-flax body kit is the world's fastest salad.

The plant-based body elements of this Porsche mark the automaker's efforts to possibly switch to natural fibre from carbon fibre. In 2019, the German automaker used a natural fibre mix to manufacture two of the doors and the rear wing. They have now added to the collection in 2020 with a naturally produced spoiler, hood, trunk lid, mudguards, diffuser and both front and rear aprons.

Each piece is uniquely produced in order to match the quality and strength of the standard carbon composite material. For the doors, light balsa wood provides the foundation while the rear wings are baked with an epoxy resin to fulfill stiffness requirements. Engineers have found not only does the natural-fibre match carbon fibre in weight and rigidity, and thereby eliminating any safety concerns, they also use less energy and cost less to produce. Other benefits include the material's vibration-dampening abilities, which Porsche says is five times better than the carbon-fibre alternative.

This unique and vegan 718 Cayman will participate in this year's 24-hour Nurburgring race and we can't wait to see how it performs. Should the vehicle pass this endurance test, Porsche says they will make the body kit available to other racers. However, this doesn't mean your next Macan can be outfitted with organic bumpers. Building a part that can survive a race is challenging but ensuring it is capable of withstanding a decade or more of four-season use is even more difficult.

Although you're unable to give your Porsche a 'green' body, through Porsche Exclusiv Manufactur you can customize your Porsche to your heart's desire. Contact Porsche Centre Kelowna today to personalize your Porsche.
